GLOBAL PLATFORM OF WOMEN COMPOSERS

Premieres by women composers on the main stage are still celebrated exceptions. Only 2% of the works included in the concert subscription hail from women. At 9%, the average share of women in the programme reached its peak – and that's only in cases of explicitly contemporary concert series. If the development towards equality continues to progress at the same rate as in the past decades, an equitable future will remain a distant prospect.

Vienna is considered the capital of modernism, exemplified in music by Arnold Schönberg's revolutionary soundscape. Yet, this modernity remains incomplete: largely European, masculine, elitist.

The Wiener Festwochen, with Nuria Schoenberg-Nono as patron, are globalising modernism, making it more female, and launching it into the boundless waters of the now. Zweite Moderne wants to make good on the promise of modernism at long last, as a global platform of women composers in Vienna.

For each of the 50 female composition students of Schönberg who were forgotten or unheard in the past, the Wiener Festwochen will work together with Arnold Schönberg Center to welcome contemporary women composers from the whole world — in accordance with the number of Schönberg's female students: 10 per year of the course of 5 years, starting from 2024.

The invited composers will develop strategies of visibility, form networks together and present their own pieces as instigators of the music and theatre landscape of the future. The pieces will be performed by Klangforum Wien.

The aim of Akademie Zweite Moderne (Academy of Second Modernism) is to have cultural institutions, festivals and ensembles involved in making concerts, scenic and performative arts commit themselves to increase the proportion of music that is composed by women in a significant way.

THE OPEN CALL IS DIRECTED AT WOMXN COMPOSERS WHO...

- ... have experience composing for ensembles, orchestras or music theatre and wish to present themselves with a piece for max. 12 musicians or artists,
- ... are concerned with current developments and tendencies that are socially relevant,
- ... see themselves as instigators of new, innovative forms of concert and music theatre,
- ... engage in a crossover of genres and/or arts (such as performance, visual art, installation, new media) with their works,
- ... want to develop strategies of visibility together with the other invited composers during a two-day workshop.
